WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF COOKIES?

In addition to helping us get to know you better, cookies make your navigation on our website faster and more efficient. Cookies help us understand how you use our website and what your preferences are (such as language and interests), eliminating the need to repeatedly enter the same information.

Functionality cookies: functionality cookies allow us to remember your preferences on your next visits. Through functionality cookies it is no longer necessary to reconfigure the website each time you visit. These cookies help us to make the website responsive to the screen size chosen by you, for example.

We use advertising cookies to remember your preferences and other information, such as your preferred language, your most recent searches, your previous interactions with the advertisements or search results, in order to measure the effectiveness of advertising.

The cookies that are used can be permanent (they are stored at the level of the Internet browser on your access devices and are used whenever you make a new visit to the website) or session cookies (they are temporary and remain in your Internet browser's cookies only until you leave the website).
